About Peter Binns

Peter's first career was as an academic; first of all, as a philosopher - mainly at Warwick University but also at Oxford and Sydney Universities. However, through the process of developing some of the first MBA courses in the UK for Business Ethics, his interests shifted to a broader concern with the way values, emotions and ideas play out in organisations and in the wider systems of which they are a part.

It was this concern that attracted him to Bath Consultancy Group, where as a director he was subsequently involved over a number of years with a variety of organisational and cultural change projects in the UK, EU, USA and South Africa. A significant number of these projects involved making a contribution to a sustainable future.

He has a long-time connection with psychotherapy, both personally and organisationally, and more recently served as the Chair of the Bath Centre for Psychotherapy and Counselling.

He currently lives in Devon, UK, and continues to work with local sustainability initiatives.
